Mysterious Madness.
At Yorkers, Westchester county, considerable excitement and alarm have been experienced during the past forty-eight hours, owing to a shocking and almost unaccountable form of madness which has simultaneously seized two young men who have been companions for some years past. The names of the apparently doomed youths are respectively Albert Jones and Augustus Howard, each of them being about eighteen years old. It is said that although living some four or five blocks apart, the youths appeared to be inseparable on or off the streets.

The first intimation received by the authorities regarding the truly unfortunate young men was on last Sunday evening, when a physician having proceeded to the house occupied by the parents of Jones, found him in violent spasms, barking like a dog, as he wildly tossed his head from side to side, occasionally snapping at some of those who were holding him on the floor by dint of force. Having administered an opiate, which in a brief time produced sound sleep on the part of the patient, the physician was invited to another apartment of the house, where Howard was suffering from symptoms precisely similar. The same treatment was adopted, followed by like results, and quiet again reigned in the neighborhood. Most singular to relate, Howard was on a friendly visit to his friend Jones, and although in an adjoining room both were struck down in horrible convulsions at the same instant. The attending physician stated that the symptoms indicated were not those of hydrophobia but were rather superinduced by nervousness. He also gave strict orders that the patients should not be allowed to see or speak to each other. Both men felt very much debilitated during the following day, until Monday evening, when they were again attacked more violently than before at their separate homes. Those who witnessed their rapid actions and terrible contortions were shocked beyond utterance.

It is asserted in the village that Jones was bitten by some man with whom he was quarreling a few weeks ago, and that the untoward circumstance has taken a tremendous hold of his mind. When he was first seized with one of those terrible paroxysms, last week, he, it is said, inflicted a savage bite on his companion (Howard) while the latter was endeavoring to aid him. The parents of both young men are in humble circumstances and the condition of the unfortunate was kept concealed for some days after Jones was first attacked. A strange feature in the latter's malady is that immediately on recovering consciousness after one of his agonizing fits of madness he eagerly asks, "Where's Gus?" and then adds, "Gus is in a fit now." The patients, although greatly weakened, felt tolerably comfortable yesterday, but it is on the approach of night the malady seems only to develop itself.

Those living in the vicinity of the stricken youths have become so alarmed for the safety of themselves and their families that on their application to the authorities a special police officer is to patrol the neighborhood each night.—N. Y. Herald.

THE RITING PASSION.—A remarkable instance of pride of descent is furnished by Mr. Beriah Botfield, formerly an English member of Parliament. This gentleman inherited from his father an immense fortune, and dying a few years ago, left his wife thirty-five thousand dollars a year, to be reduced to fifteen thousand dollars a year should she marry again. The lady has, meantime, made a secret marriage. All her fortune, except that enjoyed by her wife, Mr. Botfield left to accumulate until the second son, then unborn, of the Marquis of Bath shall attain a given age, when he should inherit it. The jointure of Mrs. Botfield will, also, at her death, form part of the said residue.

The cause of this bequest was that Mr. Botfield claimed to be descended from the same stock as the Marquis.
Lord Bath's name is Thynne, but the name of his family was originally Botville. An ancestor is said to have gained the sobriquet of "John o' th' linc" from living in one of the ancient inns of count, and thence came the name Thynne. Mr. Botfield claimed to be descended from a younger branch of the family who retained the name of Botville.

Now, Lord Bath happens to be notorious amongst his order for the assumption of superiority. He considers that only half a dozen families in the country are good enough to mate with him, and he is said to have said that he would take a generation to wipe out from his scutcheon the stain of the Baring (his mother was of this famous family blood). He therefore, is reported to have "snubbed" Mr. Botfield and looked coldly on his claims of connection with a being so august as himself. Mr. Botfield, however, was probably like the gentleman who assisted at that memorable entertainment in "David Copperfield," and covered himself with glory by averring with an intensive oath that he "would rather be knocked down by a man who had blood than be picked up by one who hadn't." Young Lord Somebody Thynne, who will succeed to his fiftieth cousin's $150,000 a year, will certainly have substantial reasons to rejoice in Mr. Botfield's love for blood.

STIGMATIC.—The New Orleans Picayune tells the following:
It is related of a western man who had acquired an immense fortune by the rise of real estate in Chicago, that upon one occasion he was induced to visit New York. On his return he was asked what he thought of the great city. He said it was very well—a grand place—and had but one fault.
"And what is that?" inquired his interlocutor.
"It is too far from Chicago."

There are more ways than one of resenting an insult. Several Prussian officers in full uniform were present at a concert in Amsterdam, not long ago. The musicians struck up "Die Wacht am Rhein," when the audience took it into their heads to hiss. The band, in order to allay the tumult, glided into the Dutch national air. At the first strains the Prussian officers uncovered their heads, rose and stood during the remainder of the piece.

The symptoms of Liver Complaint are uneasiness and pain in the side. Sometimes the pain is in the shoulder, and is mistaken for rheumatism. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, bowels in general constive, sometimes alternating with laxity with pain, and dull, heavy sensation, considerable loss of memory, accompanied with painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. Often complaining of weakness, debility and low spirits. Sometimes many of the above symptoms attend the disease, and at other times very few of them; but the liver is generally the organ most involved. Cure the liver with
